PROUD WHAT I'VE BECOME

I've walked ten thousand miles,
set sail from the shore.
Spent time with the gentiles,
but what has it all been for?
To live the life I've had,
I've had to break the mould.
Swap thirty coins of silver
for a life that's made of gold.
A life that's made of gold.
And when I can't sleep at night,
I know my soul has been sold.

I may live wondrously
with splendor all around.
Shadows for company;
a burdened heart, my battleground.
Have I compromised my core,
betraying my own ideals?
Have I deviated from the path
that was meant for me?

On reflection, have I lived the best way that I can, the best way that I can?

Time passes quickly by me,
across my best laid plans.
Despite success in life,
it somehow still slips between my hands.
The mirror's cold reflection,
it strips us to the core.
Glamour shattered forever;
wish I could be as I was before.

Has the road I've travelled on made me a better man?
On reflection, have I lived the best life that I can?

Have I compromised my core, betraying my own ideals?

Have I deviated from my younger self, my younger self, my younger self?

Am I proud what I've become? Am I proud what I've become?
Am I proud what I've become?
